

PALAEARCTIC REGION

The climate of this region is mainly temperate but ranges from arctic to subtropical.

As temperature and climate are distinctly seasonal, butterflies and moths usually have a constant number of generations each year and their flight periods can be predicted with some accuracy.